Written by Nancy Telian

When he saw Jan, jkfkfjfkf just jklemrme and decided to leave the building. She had been eriuyeriao and that was not all. She had also phivbx the proposal and told Jan to wqguinmr. What a shock! It was time to do something about that. He felt kgnkde and qpodqv. Who could blame him? He called his friend and the two of them went to mbghrixp for a drink. Later, his mghrjkwe asked him to have a talk with her. That was all he could take. Why did this have to be such a hard day?

You just struggled with dyslexia.

Your reading challenges are not so serious that you qualify for Special Education through the public schools.

Whew!

Now let's test your comprehension.

What was the main character's name?

What had Jan been doing?

What did Jan tell the main character to do?

How did he feel?

Who asked him to have a talk that night?

What does "mghrjkwe" mean?

What's another word for "qpodqv"?

Yikes! Your dyslexia caused problems with your comprehension! IT ALWAYS DOES!!!

That may be good enough for the public schools.

BUT THAT'S NOT GOOD ENOUGH FOR US!
